

WEATHER ADVISORY – NO. 2

January 29, 2013

For Immediate Release

Based on a 2:00 PM briefing from the National Weather Service (NWS):

There is a SLIGHT risk of severe thunderstorms throughout our area tonight and Wednesday morning as a squall line moves across the region.

The greatest threat for severe weather for the Metro Area will be from 5am to 10am Wednesday with a forecasted average of 1" to 2" of rain and a 15% threat of damaging winds.

Kenner's Office of Emergency Management will continue to monitor the event and advise City officials accordingly as to any significant changes
