FIRST FREEZE OF THE SEASON EXPECTED OVERNIGHT IN KENNER

Kenner, LA. – Kenner is under a freeze warning for tonight and Friday morning with temperatures expected to drop below freezing for 1 to 3 hours, according to the National Weather Service.

Lows are expected near 30 degrees, and any sensitive plants or vegetation should be protected. In addition, pets should have access to warm shelter or be brought indoors. Pipes are not at risk because of the relatively short duration of freezing temperatures.

While there is minimal impact expected from the cold weather, Kenner's Office of Emergency Management will monitor road and bridge conditions with officials throughout the parish and the state. At this time, motorists are urged to slow down on wet roads and use additional caution, particularly on elevated roadways and bridges over water.

The light rain is forecast to end by 2 p.m. today, and after a cold start Friday morning, highs are expected near 50 degrees.
