

FORMER TULANE COACH VINCE GIBSON PASSES AWAY

January 10, 2012

For Immediate Release

Former Tulane head football coach Vince Gibson has passed away at the age of 78 at his home in Kenner Tuesday morning. Gibson died as the result of battling Amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS) over the past year. ALS is commonly known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, named after the late Hall of Fame baseball player.

After coaching for many years he came to New Orleans to become the head coach of the Tulane Green Wave in 1980 through 1982. Gibson fell in love with the area and never left New Orleans, he eventually moved to Kenner.

He will be missed by many.
